

CIRU Summer Camp, China, 2017

The Confucius Institute of Rutgers University (CIRU) is pleased to announce its Summer Camp for NJ college students. Now in its fourth year, the summer camp has teamed up with Jilin University, CIRU partner university in China to bring a new experience to students. This summer camp will cover two cities: Shanghai and Changchun. Participants will have the opportunity to interact with Chinese students and experience the cultural diversity and other aspects of local life in China. It is a part of the general mission of the Confucius Institute to promote Chinese language and culture through firsthand experience of daily life in China.

Dates: June 24 - July 4, 2017

Location: The summer camp will be held on the campus of Jilin University and includes excursions to Shanghai and nearby ancient town Wuzhen.

Housing: Students will be housed in University dormitories or hotels. Double occupancy.

Participants: Up to 15 undergraduate students currently enrolled in Rutgers University and other universities in New Jersey will be accepted. Preference is given to juniors and seniors in good academic standing who have never been to China.

Financial Support: Room and board, lectures, course materials, extra-curricular activities, and scheduled excursions in China as well as partial international travel support (up to $600 per person) and will be covered.

Students' Financial Responsibilities:

- A $50 non-refundable application fee paid to CIRU upon submitting application;
- Apply for a visa to China with a valid passport (visa application fee is between $140 and $170);
- A roundtrip plane ticket between Newark and Shanghai (Students will arrive in Shanghai together but may choose a different returning route). CIRU will provide partial international travel support of up to $600);
- Personal expenses for the duration of the stay.
